SYMPOSIUM

PAGANS AND CHRISTIANS IN THE CITY

INTRODUCTION

VICTORIA HARRIS† & JOHN KOMONDORA††

On February 1, 2019, the staff of the St. John's Law Review and Journal of Catholic Legal Studies proudly held a symposium discussing Professor Steven D. Smith's Pagans and Christians in the City: Culture Wars from the Tiber to the Potomac.<sup>1</sup> This was the second symposium that the Journal of Catholic Legal Studies has brought to St. John's University School of Law's campus in Queens, New York in as many years. The Journal of Catholic Legal Studies has a rich tradition of publishing thoughtful and stimulating work on the intersection of law and religion. In keeping this new tradition, the editors and staff look forward to hosting future symposia to supplement the Journal's print work with thought-provoking debate among top scholars in the field.

The Journal was thrilled to host the following scholars for the 2019 symposium on Pagans and Christians in the City: Helen M. Alvaré,<sup>2</sup> Perry Dane,<sup>3</sup> Rev. Brian Dunkle, S.J.,<sup>4</sup> Bruce P. Frohnen,<sup>5</sup> Abner S. Greene,<sup>6</sup> Paul Horwitz,<sup>7</sup> Michael P.

Moreland,<sup>8</sup> and Anna Su,<sup>9</sup> as well as the author of Pagans and Christians, Steven D. Smith.<sup>10</sup> The symposium panelists reflected a wide range of viewpoints, backgrounds, faiths, and areas of research. This diversity allowed for a rich dialogue about Smith's text, which traverses the ancient roots of paganism and Christianity to offer thoughts on the question: "Is the combination of intellectual pantheism and a this-world-focused civil religion enough to declare the rebirth of paganism as a faith unto itself, rather than just a cultural tendency within a still-Christian order?"<sup>11</sup> The Journal of Catholic Legal Studies was lucky to have faculty advisor Marc O. DeGirolami<sup>12</sup> and the Honorable Richard J. Sullivan<sup>13</sup> as panel moderators for this event. The editors and staff would like to extend their sincere thanks to the St. John's Law School faculty and staff who contributed to this symposium,<sup>14</sup> as well as to the panelists for contributing the following insightful reflections.
