

The Catholic Lawyer

Volume 33
Number 1 Volume 33, Number 1

Article 2

October 2017

Editorial Comment

Edward T. Fagan

Follow this and additional works at: <https://scholarship.law.stjohns.edu/tcl>

Recommended Citation

Edward T. Fagan (1990) "Editorial Comment," The Catholic Lawyer. Vol. 33 : No. 1 , Article 2.
Available at: <https://scholarship.law.stjohns.edu/tcl/vol33/iss1/2>

This Editorial Comment is brought to you for free and open access by the Journals at St. John's Law Scholarship Repository. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Catholic Lawyer by an authorized editor of St. John's Law Scholarship Repository. For more information, please contact selbyc@stjohns.edu.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

This issue of The Catholic Lawyer features the papers presented at the twenty-fifth annual meeting of the Diocesan Attorneys held in Washington, D.C. Of particular interest to readers should be the material dealing with the various tax issues which confront dioceses throughout the country.

These papers appear annually in The Catholic Lawyer in line with its editorial policy that distribution of the information made available by diocesan attorneys in these meetings will result in greater awareness among all Catholic attorneys of the legal problems presently facing the parishes across our nation. Reader comment on the content of these papers is therefore invited and will be published in subsequent issues.

The Apostolic Delegate, Archbishop Jean Jadot, in a previous meeting of the Diocesan Attorneys, set the keynote for the annual meeting with his remarks on the role of attorneys in bridging the separation between church and state. His remarks deserve repetition since they are especially meaningful with respect to the subject of this year's meeting.

As lawyers, you have the duty to promote mutual understanding between church and state, and when necessary, to defend the right of any citizen to act responsibly according to his own conscience as well as the freedom of the Church to preach the gospel in season and out of season.

As lay men and lay women in the Church, you also have a duty which is summarized in the definition of your role as given in the Pastoral Constitution on the Church in the Modern World: "Secular duties and activities belong properly, although not exclusively to the laity. Therefore, acting as citizens of the world, whether individually or socially, they will observe the laws proper to each discipline, and labor to equip themselves with a genuine expertise in their various fields. They will gladly work with others seeking the same goals. Acknowledging the demands of faith 'and endowed with its force,' they will unhesitatingly devise new enterprises, where they are appropriate, and put them into action."

The Council clearly states that the laity are to look to their priests for spiritual light and nourishment, but not for expert solutions to every problem that arises. It is the distinctive role of the laity, enlightened by Christian wisdom, to seek solutions for the concrete problems of the communities of which they are a part.

Editor

