CPLR 1102: Local Governments Must Pay Indigent Matrimonial Plaintiffs' Publication Costs

St. John's Law Review

Follow this and additional works at: https://scholarship.law.stjohns.edu/lawreview

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://scholarship.law.stjohns.edu/lawreview/vol47/iss4/10

This Recent Development in New York Law is brought to you for free and open access by the Journals at St. John's Law Scholarship Repository. It has been accepted for inclusion in St. John's Law Review by an authorized editor of St. John's Law Scholarship Repository. For more information, please contact lasalar@stjohns.edu.
A difficulty arises, however, in the case of one variety of special proceeding—the summary proceeding. How can the expediency of a summary proceeding be preserved in the lengthy procedural context of an action when the two are consolidated?

In _McCarthy v. Lewin_, the vendors of real property brought a contract action and a separate summary proceeding against their vendees who had taken possession of the property sold. Reversing a lower court order, the Appellate Division, Second Department, unanimously granted the defendants' motion to consolidate on the ground that the action and the proceeding involved the same issues of fact and law. To preserve the vendors' right to a speedy adjudication in the summary proceeding, the court recommended that a motion by either party for a trial preference be granted, and that noticing for trial not be delayed by pretrial proceedings.

The court's decision prevents duplication of proceedings while, to some extent, preserving the summary nature of the proceeding which the plaintiffs were entitled to bring.

Article 11 — Poor Persons

CPLR 1102: Local governments must pay indigent matrimonial plaintiffs' publication costs.

While CPLR 1102 does not expressly provide for public payment of indigents' publication costs in matrimonial actions, the United States Supreme Court has recognized that local governments must pay indigent matrimonial plaintiffs' publication costs. This is because the United States Constitution and federal law require that indigent plaintiffs have access to the courts. CPLR 1102(d) exempts a poor person from liability for "costs and fees" except when he recovers in the action. Courts have reached opposite conclusions as to whether the statute covers publication costs in matrimonial actions. See _Brown v. Wyman_, 59 Misc. 2d 740, 300 N.Y.S.2d 525 (Sup. Ct. Onondaga County 1969) (statute sanctions payment of publication costs by county); _Jeffreys v. Jeffrey_, 58 Misc. 2d 1045, 296 N.Y.S.2d 74 (Sup. Ct. Kings County 1968), discussed in _The Quarterly Survey_, 44 St. John's L. Rev. 135, 139 (1969), rev'd on other grounds, 38 App. Div. 2d 431, 330 N.Y.S.2d 550 (2d Dep't 1972), discussed in _The Quarterly Survey_, 47 St. John's L. Rev. 148, 162 (1972) (statute does not authorize payment of publication costs).
States Supreme Court's decision in Boddie v. Connecticut mandates that no person be denied the opportunity to seek a divorce because of his indigency. Accordingly, New York courts have ordered public payment of these costs for indigent litigants when personal service could not be made. A division arose over the question as to whether these costs are a state or local responsibility. The Court of Appeals recently settled the issue in Deason v. Deason, unanimously holding that Boddie requires payment of an indigent divorce plaintiff's publication costs and that these costs are a local responsibility in the absence of legislation. The Court's decision was without prejudice to an application by the parties for a determination whether expedient service under CPLR 308(5) is available in lieu of service by publication.

The Court of Appeals' decision in Deason aids the indigent litigant by giving final recognition to the broad mandate of the Boddie case and by fixing the responsibility for fulfilling it on the local governments. Additionally, the Court's invitation to use CPLR 308(5) in matrimonial actions would provide a means to avoid the onerous costs of publication while increasing the likelihood that the defendant will receive notice of the action.

---

35 While Boddie involved the payment of costs and fees to public officers, the Court of Appeals in Deason reasoned that its holding should apply equally to "auxiliary" costs paid to nonofficial persons which can block access to the courts.
36 The Court held that the costs would be paid by the county governments or, in New York City, by the city government.
38 The Supreme Court has characterized service by publication as the method of service least calculated to give a defendant notice of an action. Boddie v. Connecticut, 401 U.S. 371, 382 (1971).