Wills--Administrator C.T.A.--Who May Qualify (Matter of Murphy, 304 N.Y. 232 (1952))

St. John's Law Review

Follow this and additional works at: https://scholarship.law.stjohns.edu/lawreview

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://scholarship.law.stjohns.edu/lawreview/vol27/iss1/19

This Recent Development in New York Law is brought to you for free and open access by the Journals at St. John's Law Scholarship Repository. It has been accepted for inclusion in St. John's Law Review by an authorized editor of St. John's Law Scholarship Repository. For more information, please contact lasalar@stjohns.edu.
such an organization, where the enforcement of a substantive right under the United States Constitution is involved. The English courts have taken a similar view and have held that a union may be sued in its registered name.

It is submitted that the law as it stands today in New York is inequitable. An organization the size of a labor union, which occupies such an important place in our economy, should be made to answer for tortious acts committed in its name, without being permitted to raise, as a condition precedent to its liability, the establishment of the individual responsibility of each of its members. If the courts in their capacity as interpreters of the law feel it impossible so to construe the statute as it presently exists, it would seem desirable that the law be changed.

WILLS — ADMINISTRATOR c.t.a. — WHO MAY QUALIFY. — Testator had named his widow sole beneficiary and executrix. Prior to probate of the will, his widow died, naming a bank her executor. The bank, however, declined to administer testator's estate. Testator's sister, claiming to be his next of kin within the meaning of the Surrogate's Court Act, although not entitled to share in his estate, petitioned for letters of administration c.t.a. In denying private statutes for the better government of the corporation... Yet these associations lack that first indicium of corporateness, a charter. They cannot, in most jurisdictions, be sued in their own names.

---

21 See United Mine Workers v. Coronado Coal Co., supra note 20 at 388. "It would be unfortunate if an organization with as great power as this International Union has... in a wide territory... could assemble its assets to be used... free from liability for injuries [resulting from their]... torts..."

22 United Mine Workers v. Coronado Coal Co., supra note 20; see Faby, supra note 2.

23 Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(b).

24 Taff Vale Ry. v. Amalgamated Society of Ry. Servants, [1901] A. C. 426. In 1906, the Trades Disputes Act was passed, providing that "(1) An action against a trade union... or against any members or officials thereof... in respect of any tortious act alleged to have been committed by or on behalf of the trade union, shall not be entertained by any court. "(2) Nothing in this section shall affect the liability of the trustees of a trade union to be sued in the events provided for by the Trade Union Act, 1871... except in respect of any tortious act committed by or on behalf of the union in contemplation or in furtherance of a trade dispute." Trades Disputes Act, 1906, 6 Edw. VII, c. 47, § 4. See cases construing this statute cited in Note, 27 A. L. R. 786, 797 (1923).

1 N. Y. DEC. EST. LAW § 83(4). Since the estate was valued at less than $10,000.00, decedent's sister was not entitled to participate under this statute.

2 An administrator c.t.a. (i.e., with the will annexed) is a person appointed petitioner the letters, the court reversed the decision of the Appellate Division and held that within the meaning of the Surrogate’s Court Act, “next of kin” are those actually entitled to share in the estate. 3

The right to administer an estate does not arise because of interest in the estate or relationship per se, but rather interest and relationship are made relevant by statute. 4

In New York, the right has always been conferred upon persons interested in the estate, in the belief that their economic interest and the bond of consanguinity would induce them to administer in a wiser fashion than one without this interest. 5

The statutory provision regulating the granting of letters of administration c.t.a. stipulates that, except as to the order of priority it enumerates, the requirements of the section governing administration in case of intestacy shall apply. 6

Though the order of priority among the various classes of persons entitled to letters of administration c.t.a. and in the event of intestacy is mandatory, 7 the Surrogate may exercise discretion within certain classes entitled to letters of administration c.t.a. 8

The New York statute provides categories of persons entitled to letters of administration c.t.a., among whom are the “next of kin.” 9

Early American decisions interpreted this phrase to mean a person who is a distributee. 10 Later in Lathrop v. Smith, 11 the New York by the surrogate “[i]f no person is named as executor in the will or selected by virtue of a power contained therein or if at any time there is no executor or administrator with the will annexed qualified to act . . . .” N. Y. Surr. Ct. Acr § 133 (1925).

6 N. Y. Surr. Ct. Acr § 133. “Except as to the right of priority as provided in this section, the provisions of section one hundred and eighteen of this act apply to an application for letters of administration with the will annexed.” This has been construed as applying only to the next of kin. Matter of Thompson, 186 Misc. 528, 60 N. Y. S. 2d 508 (Surr. Ct. 1938). Contra: Matter of Baume, 160 Misc. 563, 290 N. Y. Supp. 981 (Surr. Ct. 1936).

8 Matter of Krackenberger, 86 N. Y. S. 2d 408 (Surr. Ct. 1949); Matter of Thompson, supra note 6.

9 N. Y. Surr. Ct. Acr § 133(4). “If there is no such legatee or none who will accept, then to the husband, or wife, or to one or more of the next of kin, or to one or more of the heirs or devisees, so qualified.” (Emphasis added.)

11 24 N. Y. 417, 35 Barb. 64 (1862).
Court of Appeals ruled that all persons who might be entitled to participate in the distribution of the estate in the event of intestacy have a right to letters of administration in the order enumerated by statute. Over a period of time subsequent to the Lathrop case, several changes were made in the wording of the statute. This state of flux was reflected in decisional law, since some courts followed Lathrop v. Smith, while others continued to adhere to the prior rule. In a 1914 opinion, Judge Cardozo stated that it was not necessary that a next of kin actually share in the distribution of the estate; but he refused to state his reasons, asserting that a statute which was to become effective after the decision would produce a new rule and render obsolete the Lathrop decision.

This 1914 amendment substituted the words “entitled to take or share in the (decedent’s) personal property” for the phrase “entitled to succeed.” The reported decisions of lower courts have recognized this statutory change by consistently holding that “next of kin” meant one who would actually share in the estate. In 1951, the First Department of the Appellate Division, in Matter of Murphy, ignored these rulings, and adhered to the construction established by the Court of Appeals in the Lathrop case. The Murphy decision would have created confusion on this point of law, inasmuch as it was a binding precedent on the Surrogate’s Courts of the Department, while the other three departments could continue to rule as they had since the 1914 amendment became effective.

In reversing the decision of the First Department, the Court of Appeals upheld the policy followed in the other departments. Relying on the reasoning of the courts subsequent to the 1914 amendment, it held that by “next of kin” was meant one who would actually share in the distribution of the estate.

12 In 1863 that statute relating to letters of administration was amended to read: “This section shall not be construed to authorize the granting of letters to any relative not entitled to succeed to the personal estate of the deceased as his next of kin at the time of his decease.” Laws of N.Y. 1863, c. 362, § 3. In 1867 this amendment was deleted. Laws of N.Y. 1867, c. 782, § 27. In 1893 the language “would be entitled to succeed to his personal property” was changed to “entitled to succeed to his personal property.” Laws of N.Y. 1893, Vol. 2, c. 686, § 2660.

15 See Matter of D’Adamo, 212 N.Y. 214, 218, 106 N.E. 81, 82 (1914).

16 Laws of N.Y. 1914, c. 443, § 2588. “Administration in case of intestacy must be granted to the persons entitled to take or share in the personal property . . . .” (emphasis added).

This is the first authoritative ruling on the definition of "next of kin" since the above mentioned amendment became effective. The result has been to check conflicting interpretations among the various departments of the Appellate Division.

WILLS—DUPLICATE WILLS—RETENTION OF BOTH BY TESTATOR DURING HIS LIFE.—Decedent executed her will in duplicate and retained both copies. After her death, the ribbon copy was missing and only the carbon copy offered for probate. The contestant argued that, since all the executed copies were not produced, there arose a presumption of revocation of the will. In reversing a decree denying probate, the Appellate Division held that, since both copies were retained by the decedent, the discovery of one of them at her death is sufficient to support a jury's finding of non-revocation. Matter of Mittelstaedt, 280 App. Div. 163, 112 N. Y. S. 2d 166 (1st Dep't 1952).

When a single will has been executed and it is established that it was not within the testator's possession or control prior to his death, no presumption of revocation arises in the event that the will is missing. Any such presumption would be entirely overcome by the inaccessibility of the instrument to the testator and the consequent improbability of his having destroyed it. However, when a single will is last traced to the testator and, upon his death, cannot be found, there arises the presumption that he destroyed it animo revocandi. The disappearance is presumed intentional, in the latter case, because of the ambulatory character of the will, coupled with its availability to the testator.

The presumption of revocation, in such circumstances, may be rebutted by proof that the will was "...in existence at the time of the testator's death, or was fraudulently destroyed in his lifetime ... ." The burden of such proof is on the proponent. It

3 See id. at 654.

5 See Matter of Kennedy, supra note 3 at 168, 60 N. E. at 443; Betts v. Jackson, 6 Wend. 173, 181 (N. Y. 1830).
