PERSONALITIES IN THE NEWS

As an experiment, a Catholic lawyer in each state was requested to send the names of any Catholic who had been elected or appointed to judicial or other high public office in his state during the past year. The response was incomplete. However, in some instances the replies were broader than the question.

In recognizing that the New York survey is incomplete, we realize that the listings for the other states must be incomplete too. Nevertheless the information is set forth substantially as it was received.

Although our policy on the publication of future similar features has not yet been determined, we would appreciate being advised of Catholics who are elected or appointed to high office during the calendar year 1956.
